

Karen Carrasquillo

Chief Innovation and Education Officer at BostonSight. In addition, she is an adjunct clinical professor at the New England College of Optometry, an adjunct clinical professor at the school of optometry, MCPHS University, Advisory Board member for the Gas Permeable Lens Institute (GPLI), Fellow of the American Academy of Optometry (FAAO), Fellow of the Educational Society of Scleral Lenses (FSLs), Fellow of the British Contact Lens Association (FBCLA), Global Ambassador of the BCLA, and Board Member for the non-profit Latinos En Optometry (LEO). Dr. Carrasquillo is an international key opinion leader and speaker, having delivered more than 120 presentations locally and internationally, also the author of numerous publications on the therapeutic use of scleral lenses and prosthetic replacement of the eye surface system (PROSE) and is also the author of several patents. She is the founder and Program Chair of FitAcademy, an educational retreat for Cornea and Contact Lens practitioners, past Chair of the 2024 Global Ophthalmic Women (GLOW) congress, 2021 Vision Monday's Most Influential Women in Optical Award, 2024's New England College of Optometry Distinguished Alumni Award, member of the International Society of Contact Lens Specialists (ISCLS), 2025 Top 100 ALX Honoree, and past planning committee member for the International Congress of Scleral Contacts (ICSC) congress.

Prior to completing her doctorate degree in Optometry and her residency in Cornea and Contact Lenses, she completed a PhD in Chemistry at the University of Puerto Rico and a postdoctoral fellowship in ophthalmological research from the Massachusetts Eye and Ear, Harvard Medical School, in Boston, MA.